Language Focus: Parts of Speech

Parts of speech are the different word classes that we use in English. Some words can take on different meanings, or word classes, by changing the ending of the word. Today's lesson will show you the difference between 4 common parts of speech in English.

1. A noun represents the person, or people, the place/s or thing/s.

Common endings – gets a plural –s, e.g. teachers; -sion, -tion, -ment, -er, -or and there is often an article (a, an, the) before the singular noun.

E.g. The young, handsome teacher enthusiastically teaches his students.

2. An adjective describes the noun; giving more information about the person, place or thing.

Common endings - er, -est, -ive. -ed, -al

E.g. The young, handsome teacher enthusiastically teaches his students.

3. A verb represents the action of the noun; telling what the noun is doing.

Common endings –ed (regular past tense); -s, -es (present tense he/she/it); or irregular.

E.g. The young, handsome teacher enthusiastically teaches his students.

4. An adverb describes how the verb is done, giving more information about the action.

Common ending -ly

E.g. The young, handsome teacher enthusiastically teaches his students.

Here are some words taken from the stories. Try to find the other parts of speech that these words can become by changing their endings. Use a dictionary, if you are unsure. The spaces with the ----- do not have a part of speech in that form. Answers are in the appendix.

Transcripts of Weekly news stories

	JANUARY 23 RD WEEKLY NEWS STORIES	TIME
Introduction	Hi, this is Rosa Marchitelli. You're listening to Learning English with CBC for the week of January 23 rd .	0:00
Story 1	Allegations at city hall that councillors have been drunk and even used drugs while on the job. The accusations came up during a city council committee meeting that was discussing adding more rules on booze. Calgary's mayor says he hasn't seen it but he has heard of councillors drinking alcohol and using illegal drugs at city hall. Naheed Nenshi says that's why council needs to tighten the rules about the use of alcohol by councillors. A city committee is looking at amending its ethical conduct policy, so elected officials have to follow the same rules as city employees -- no alcohol at work.	0:08
Story 2	There are unsettling reports about Muslim women in Calgary being harassed since the massacre at Charlie Hebdo in France. Hiba only wants her first name used after an incident that occurred as she was driving her son to school. She says confusion at a 4-way stop prompted a man to pull up beside her and begin yelling racial slurs while punching the mirror and window of her vehicle. Police dismissed the incident as road rage, but Hiba wears a hijab and she is certain the attack was racially motivated. She says Muslim women need to be careful. Local Muslim activist Saima Jamal says she has documented several similar incidents since the massacre in France. She says police need to take reports like Hiba's seriously and she is urging the Mayor to speak out on behalf of Muslim women.	0:55
Story 3	The Holidays are over. The bills are coming in, and the weather is a bit grey. January 19th has been called Blue Monday. According to an ATB Financial survey, half of Albertans are feeling stressed that day. For many, the problem is a lack of sleep. For others, it's financial problems. SAIT is taking steps to improve morale during January. It's launched the 28 Days of Happiness. Students who sign up on-line will get an e-mail each day with a positive message or activity.	2:00
